25X1 While proceeding along the Soviet-Turkish border between YEREVAN and LENINAKAN, the train ran parallel to the border river in two places at a distance of only a few hundred yards. In these two places the space between the border river and the railroad track was blocked by barbed-wire entanglements, extending in a depth of 650 to 1,000 feet. Soviet double sentries were, at intervals, patrolling along the railroad track in the two mentioned border sections. No other fortifications and no other Soviet troops were seen there. Nothing out of the ordinary was observed on the Turkish bank of the border river.
